

A few thoughts to consider on God and government and the relationship between the two. Angelo Natoli, one of our viewers, sent us this e-mail:

"The Law is the Law"

"So if the U.S. government determines that it is against the law for the words 'under God' to be on our money, then so be it. And if that same government decides that the Ten Commandments are not to be used in or on a government installation, then so be it. I would like to think that those people have the American public's best interests at heart. But you know what else I'd like? I don't believe the government and its employees should participate in the Easter and Christmas celebrations, which honor the God that our government is eliminating from many facets of American life... I'd like my mail delivered on Christmas, Good Friday, Thanksgiving and Easter. After all, it's just another day. I'd like the Senate and the House of Representatives not to have to worry about getting home for the Christmas break. After all, it's just another day to a government that is trying to be politically correct. What do you all think? Maybe our elected officials will stop giving in to the minority opinions and begin once again to represent the majority of all of the American people. So be it."
